

HackerCrunch Software Engineering Program Registration and Financial Contract with HackerCrunch LLC

What to expect from this program: HackerCrunch's program, also known as the HackerCrunch Software Engineering Advanced Program, aims to teach your child the fundamentals of computer science through learning the popular Javascript ES6 language to use Facebook's React.js web application development framework and create a web application project together as a team. Students will dig much deeper into back end development (using Node.js, MongoDB, AWS DynamoDB, and REST APIs) to achieve skills similar to a full stack developer. In addition, students will learn about software infrastructure with different AWS services. After completing the full 5 months of the program, each student in the advanced program will be offered a 12 week summer software engineering internship at one of our partnering start ups to get actual experience in a software engineering team environment.
